

The West Between the Wars

1919-1939

The Futile Search for Stability

The peace settlement of World War I left many nations unhappy, and the League of Nations proved unable to deal with the crises following the war.

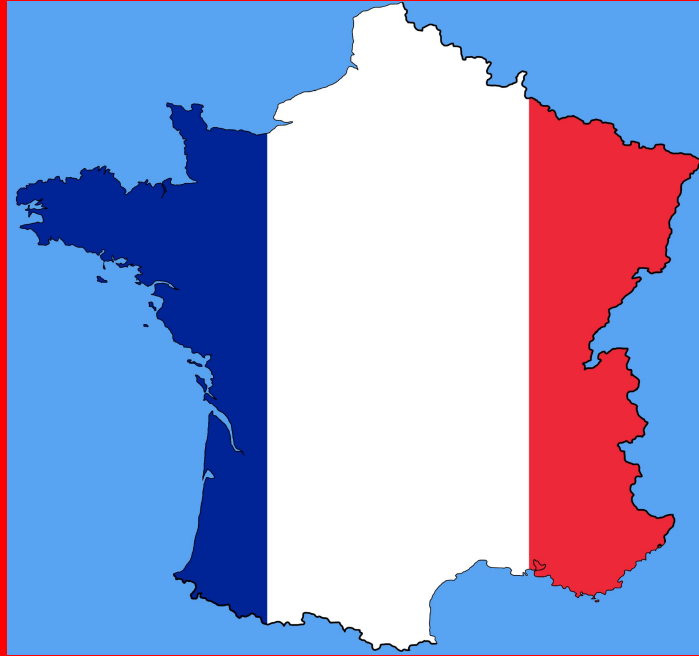

The brief period of prosperity that began in Europe during the early 1920's ended in 1929 with the beginning of the Great Depression. This economic collapse shook people's confidence in political democracy and paved the way for fear and the rise of extremist parties that offered solutions to the hardships that many were enduring.
